

Unusual Enrollment History 2020-2021

NAME (please print legibly)

STUDENT ID

Beginning with the 2013-14 school year, the U. S. Department of Education has established new requirements to help prevent fraud and abuse in the federal programs by identifying students with unusual enrollment patterns and indicating on the ISIR that these patterns exist. Many students with unusual enrollment patterns may have a legitimate reason for their enrollment history at multiple institutions. However, such enrollment patterns now require an institutional review to determine whether valid, documentable reasons exist for the unusual enrollment patterns. This must be satisfactorily resolved by the institution before you can receive financial aid. Students may also be selected for this process if they received a Federal Pell Grant during the last three consecutive years, but did not successfully complete the number of hours for which the Pell Grant was provided.

In order to resolve this issue, you must provide an official OR unofficial copy of all prior college transcripts to our Financial Aid Office for official evaluation. You will not be eligible for financial aid until this process has been completed.

You need to go online to the National Student Loan Data System www.nslds.ed.gov/nslds_SA/ and print a copy of the institutions that you have attended and provide that printout with this form, then answer the following questions:

Have you enrolled at Roanoke Chowan Community College previously and earned college credits? ____

If no, please explain why you have decided to pursue a program at Roanoke Chowan Community College.

As mentioned above, for each school attended from your NSLDS report, you must provide an official transcript to Roanoke-Chowan Community College Financial Aid office for evaluation. If you did not receive full passing credit for all courses taken at the prior institutions, provide your explanation, along with complete documentation that supports the reasons why your progress was interrupted at each school. Please attach additional sheets as necessary.
